

SINGER SAYS SHE IS NOT A HEROINE

Florence L. Holtzman, Whose Presence of Mind Saved Her Automobile from Wreck, Declares She Is Not Brave.

IN PERIL OF AWFUL DEATH.

She Crawls Under the Blazing Wheels of the Machine and Turns Off the Controlling Crank in Time to Avert Explosion.

When Miss Florence Lee Holtzman, soprano soloist of Temple Emanuel, was told by a policeman that her automobile was on fire she jumped out and saw that the gasoline tanks were overheated and liable to explode and wreck the machine.

She got down on her hands and knees, crawled under the blazing vehicle and turned off the controlling crank. She did not know but that the whole thing might explode in another instant. "That was the chance she took."

"I don't think that that was anything to do," said the young woman to-day. "I didn't want to lose the machine, and, anyway, I was good and angry. A new piece of machinery had been put on the auto and its construction was faulty, which caused the escape of gasoline. I was just going to the people who made the repairs to tell them what I thought about their work when the fluid began to escape."

"And you don't think you did rather a brave thing?"

"Doesn't Think She's Brave."

"If you call that brave, I've done braver things than that," Miss Holtzman said with a laugh. "We all ought to have our heads about us always; that's what we are built for."

Miss Holtzman was met by an Evening World reporter just as she swung out of the entrance to her apartments at No. 304 West Ninety-fourth street, with a "swagger-looking" Boston terrier at her heels.

"We are going to see how long it will take to put the machine in trim again for use," were her first words. The terrier looked up at her knowingly and then started off ahead unconcernedly in the direction of the auto hospital.

"Makes Light of Her Injury."

"It was very foolish of me," she continued, "to give my name to the police. If I hadn't no one would ever have known anything about the accident. I came home and entertained friends all the afternoon and said nothing about it, and now they will read it in the papers and hear of it for the first time. They won't believe it, for I was not injured, only a little burn here, on my wrist, and my sleeve covered that."

Miss Holtzman unconsciously turned back the edge of her sleeve and showed an ugly scorch that must have been painful. She is a young woman that one recognizes on the instant of meeting to be sure of herself. She is typically American, she does things naturally, because they have to be done and not with the thought that others will applaud them.

THE BRAVE SINGER WHO SAVED HER AUTOMOBILE FROM EXPLOSION.

BEATEN AND ROBBED SEEING TENDERLOIN

Conductor Milligan, of Ithaca, Finds Two "Friends," Who Punch Him Hard and Take Nearly $200.

With his face pounded into a pulp, $200 he had brought with him from Ithaca gone, and, as a whole, a subject for the hospital, Morris W. Milligan, of Ithaca, asked Patrolman Sindt for assistance this morning.

Milligan arrived in the city yesterday. He had heard of the Tenderloin from the college boys who ride on the car he runs in Ithaca and wanted to see it. A couple of men he met said they would show it to him.

He remained with them all day seeing the various saloons run by former prize-fighters and other celebrities, and spent a portion of the $200 he had with him.

This morning the two led him to Thirty-sixth street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues. One punched him while the other took a strange hold on him. When he had been pounded so that he was unable to resist they took from him what money he had left and then threw him down an alleyway.

The two men started to run for it, and Milligan let out a faint yell. One hurried back to him and placed a revolver to his head and told him that if he did not keep quiet he would blow his "block" off. The men then hurried away, while Milligan watched them in silence. Then he walked to Seventh avenue and wandered along until he met the policeman.

He was sent to Roosevelt Hospital, where he was patched up and permitted to go on his way.

Making Piano Possession Easy

Your own wish, or the longing of your wife or daughter, have no doubt proven long since that piano possession is desirable. But perhaps you don't know how easy it is, by the WANAMAKER system, to secure immediate possession of a thoroughly good piano, and pay for it in small monthly sums, that are little more than people used to pay to rent a piano.

People in very good circumstances often hesitate at the thought of paying in cash the price of a good piano. But any one who has extra money to use for pleasure each month can buy a piano with very little effort, and find in the end that the plan has simply been a savings bank for money that would have gone to waste without bringing any tangible return, if the piano had not been bought.

If you or some member of your family has the wish for a piano, come in and let us tell you how easy it is to secure an instrument that you will be proud of, and that will provide enjoyment and a musical education for your family.
